Agile methods in safety-critical software development

May 08, 2018–May 09, 2018

Agile methods have become state of the art in software development. Agile teams are able to react to changing requirements, delivering intermediate solutions for rapid feedback. Model-based development, by its very nature, contributes to early validation and is hence in line with agile principles. What are the challenges in agile model-based software development? How are challenges addressed?

The webinar will take place on two alternative dates in English:
